Homecoming with '76 spirit

"The Spirit of '76 Kingsmen Style" was present in the hearts of each student, as homecoming activities got underway. Starting the week's activities was the class hall decoration competition which added enthusiasm to the halls of Penn.

On Thursday evening a community pep session and bonfire were held to acquaint Penn families and the community with our number one rated Kingsmen.

Sportscaster Sam Smith spoke at the Friday pep session, warning the Kingsmen that the St. Joe Indians were well prepared for that night's contest. Kingsmen fans pushed the team on to a 14-12 victory over St. Joe for the first time ever in Penn's history.

Half-time activities included the presentation of floats by each of the classes, with the senior float winning first place. Lyn Laidig was crowned homecoming queen while the Marching Kingsmen played the traditional "Special Angel." Members of her court were Lisa Lockwood, Beth Hunt, Leslie Turecek and Chris Barone.

After the game a homecoming dance was held, featuring WRBR disc jockies R. C. Rogers and Dick O'Day.

Junior girls triumph over seniors

Spirit, cooperation, and a sense of determination aided the juniors to a spectacular victory in the 1975 girls' powderpuff football game. The juniors upset the sophomores, 12-0, and the defending champion seniors, 6-0.

The juniors got off to an encouraging start with Jamie Mittiga racing 30 yards on a punt return to give the juniors a 6-0 lead. Then quarterback Kelly Adelsperger tossed a ten-yard touchdown pass to flanker Sue Cunningham for a 12-0 score.

But the juniors' pace was extremely slowed down by the favored seniors. With neither team managing to light up the scoreboard at the end of regulation time, the seniors received the ball on the ten yard line. On fourth down with the ball on the five, the senior drive was stopped by a deflected pass from Betsy Reinholtz to Kim Clark.

However, the juniors were more successful in their attempt to score as they only needed two plays to cover ten yards. Junior Sue Cunningham scampered five yards for the touchdown on a hand off from quarterback Kelly Adelsperger.

Count Dracula chills Penn

"Count Dracula," based on Bram Stroker's 19th century tale of supernatural evil, is a creative version of the classic story of a suave vampire whose passion is sinking his teeth into the throats of beautiful young women.

As the play unfolds, the Count has rented an old, ghostly castle next to an asylum for the insane. Dr. Seward operates the institution and lives with his somewhat looney sister, Sybil.

Trouble begins when Sybil, finding the Count very attractive, invites him over for dinner, not realizing the ideas which lie within his mind. Added trouble comes from Renfield, a schizophrenic inmate in league with the vampire.

Mina, the Count's last victim, is the ward of Dr. Seward, in whose provincial insane asylum the terrifying action transpires. Her fiance, Jonathan, arrives from London, worried over her strange trance-like state. Equally concerned is professor Van Helsing, a specialist in rare maladies who senses the supernatural at work and desperately tries to cure young Mina.

As Mina's character changes more and more to that of a vampire, she follows the Count, leading the others to the crypt at Castle Carfax where Dracula is destroyed by the stake of Dr. Seward and Professor Van Helsing. Directing the production was Mrs. Karlyn Wendt with assistance from Cricket Boyer.

Theater presents a comedy

"You Can't Take It With You," by Moss Hart-George Kaufman, is a satirical comedy about an American family of the 1930's.

The three-act play takes place in the bizarre Vanderhof home in New York. Martin Vanderhof finds himself in trouble with the Internal Revenue Service for not paying his taxes for 24 years.

Each member of this "kooky" family has found satisfaction by doing what he likes best and forgetting all those around him. The grandfather of the Sycamore family is fond of high school commencements and finds entertainment in collecting snakes and stamps as hobbies. The woman of the house, Penny Sycamore, becomes intrigued with the fine arts, and tries her skill at writing plays and painting portraits. Her husband, Paul Sycamore, however, is enchanted with the creation of fireworks. The Sycamores' two daughters are Essie, an aspiring ballerina married to a xylophone player, and Alice the "normal" family member engaged to her boss's son, Tony.

It is only after an unexpected visit by Tony's parents that the family realizes that some people are different from others. But no one is any better or any worse than themselves.

Directing the production was Mrs. Karlyn Wendt; student directors were Kim Bish and Penny Ludwig.

Foreign students grace Penn

This year Penn played host to a bit of Italy by the name of Giacomo Ricca. Kohei Matesto represented a taste of Japan, while Sonja Lidsheim and Magdelena Schindler represented Norway and Switzerland. The backgrounds and the cultures of their respective nations which they brought to Penn offered students an opportunity to learn a little of the world outside the United States.

Giacomo Ricca, from Savana, Italy, stayed with the James Fritz family in Osceola. He enjoyed most sports especially soccer and football and took among other classes gym, world geography, earth science and economics. As a senior, Giacomo realized that one of his biggest problems was the English language.

Japanese student Kohei Matesto lived with senior Greg Cunningham. Kohei, whose favorite sport was judo, took an active part in Penn wrestling. Kohei came from a town smaller than Mishawaka, where he lived with his parents and three brothers. He explained that the Japanese school week is longer than the American one beginning at 8:45 and ending at 3:45, Monday through Saturday. At Penn Kohei took a full schedule including both government and economics, and U.S. history. Although this country was new and different, Kohei found many things to his liking—especially good old American hot dogs and hamburgers.

Speak of a lover for music and you have Sonja Lidsheim, a 16-year-old student from Norway. Sonja enjoyed Penn while she lived with Bev Pettifor. As other foreign students, Sonja had problems with the language. Among her classes at Penn were two music classes, symphonic band and choir. U.S. history, typing, foods and 19th century literature comprised the remainder of her schedule at Penn.

Magdelena Schindler arrived from Peru, Switzerland, where her father writes for the newspaper and her mother is a local teacher. Magdelena, a senior at Penn, stayed with Lori Mynsberge. While visiting here she saw Chicago and was happy to have been given the opportunity to enjoy the tall buildings and other sights. She hoped to visit the ocean before returning to Switzerland. Magdelena took classes in foods, probability, physics and self-identity. She found little difference in the American and Swiss teenagers and came to America to meet new people and learn our customs.

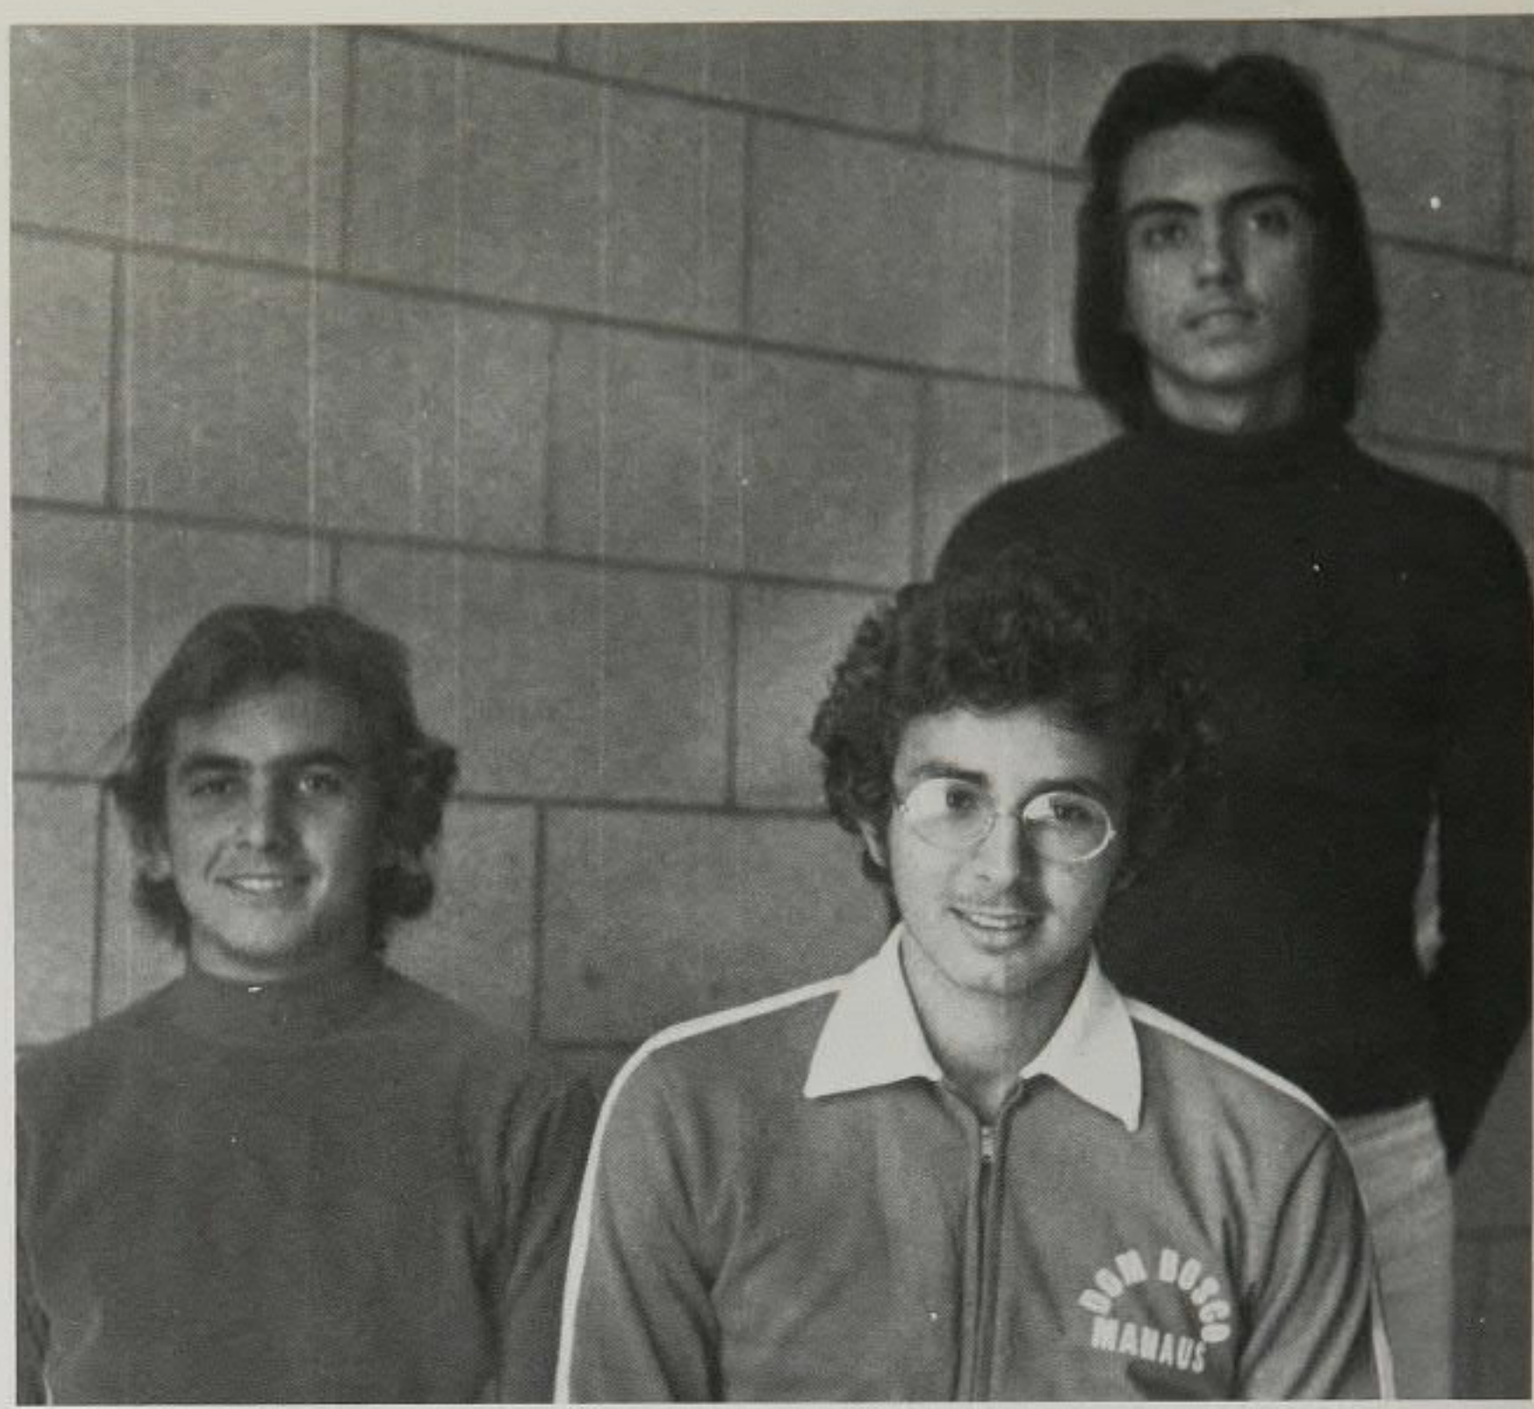
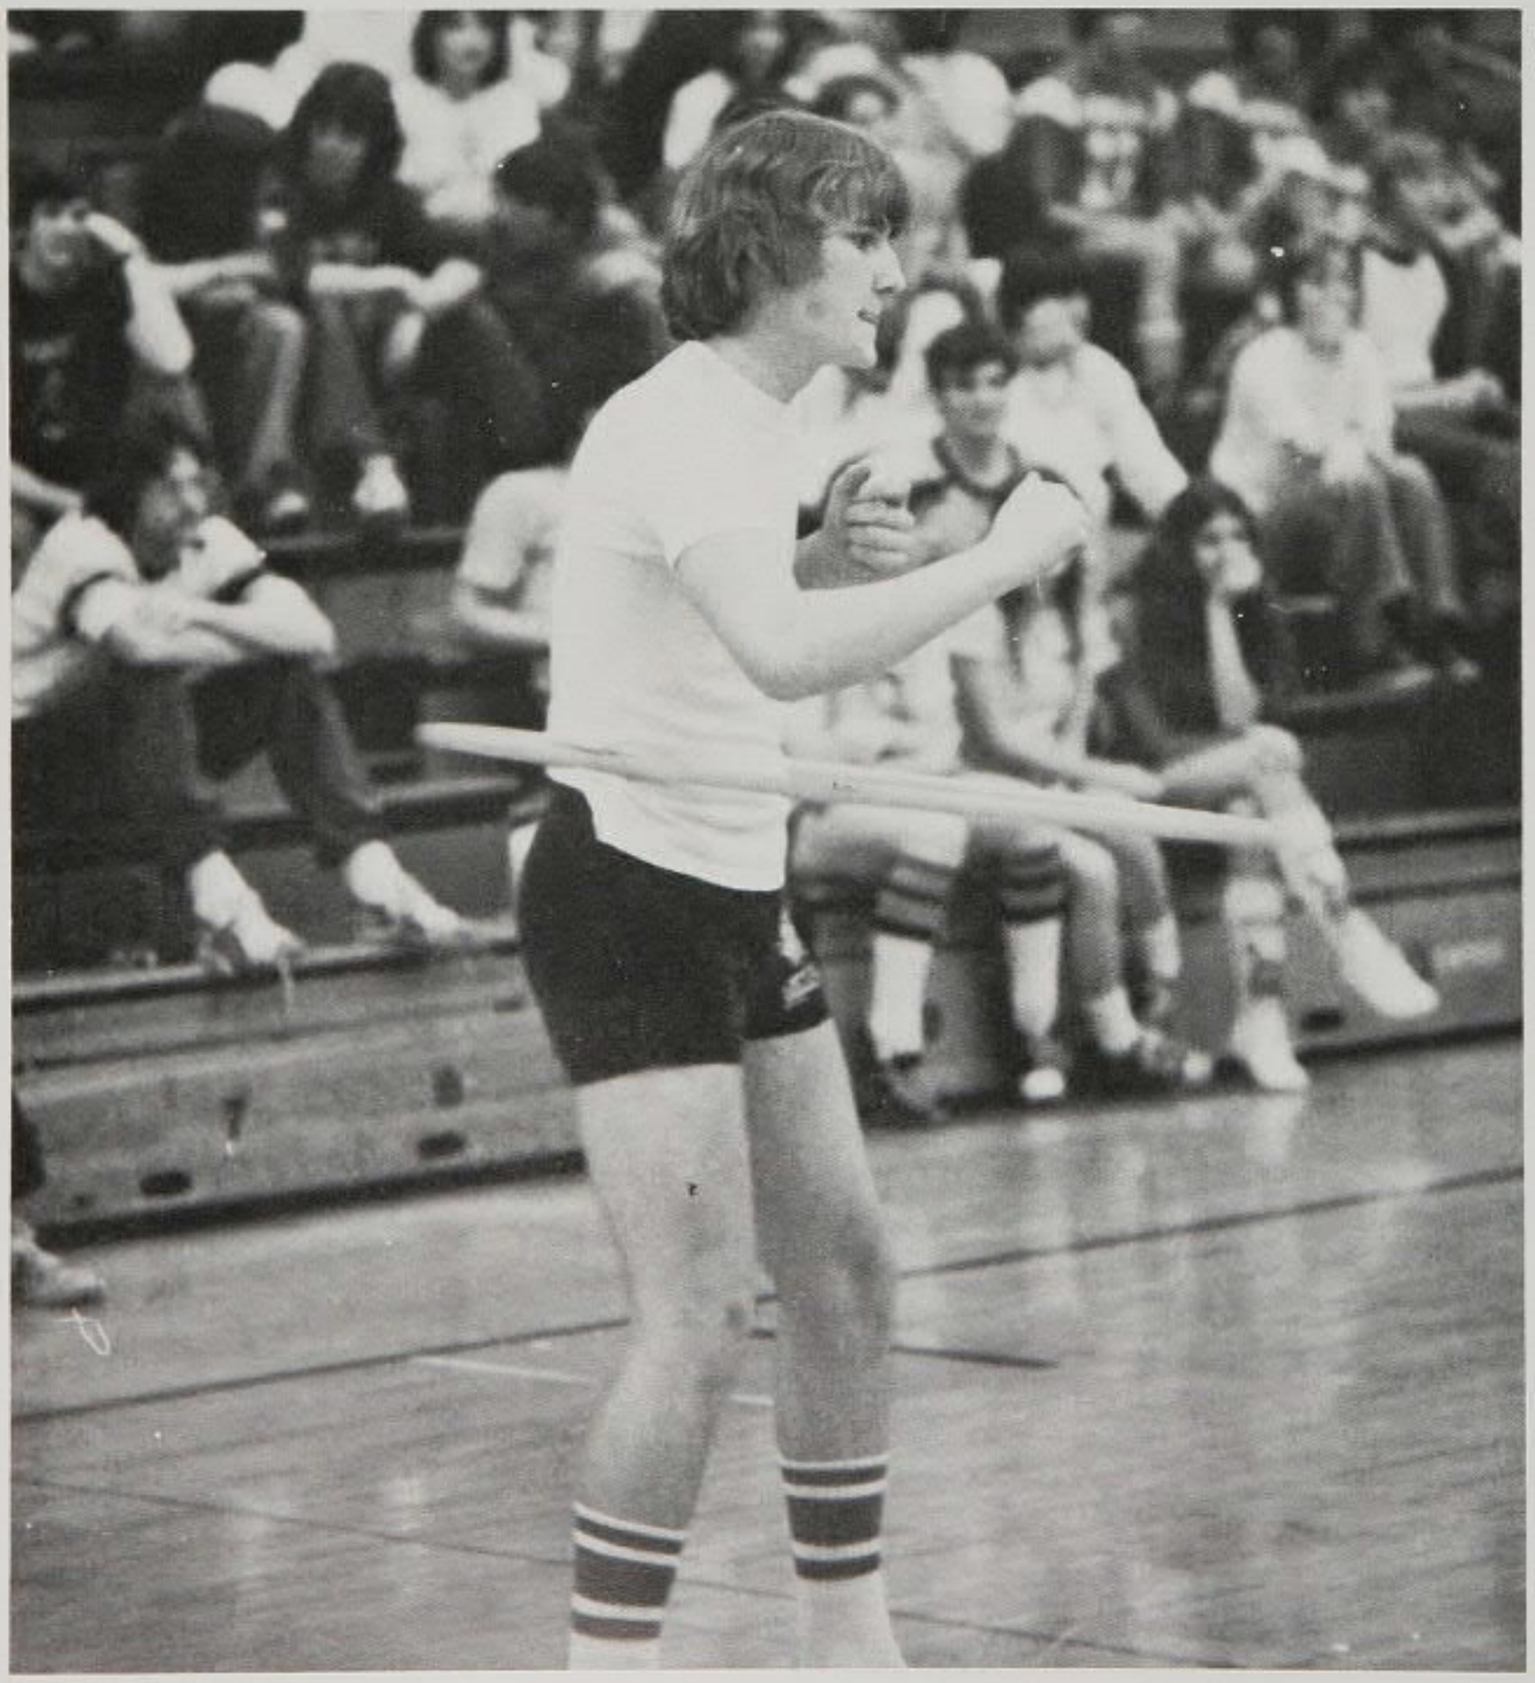
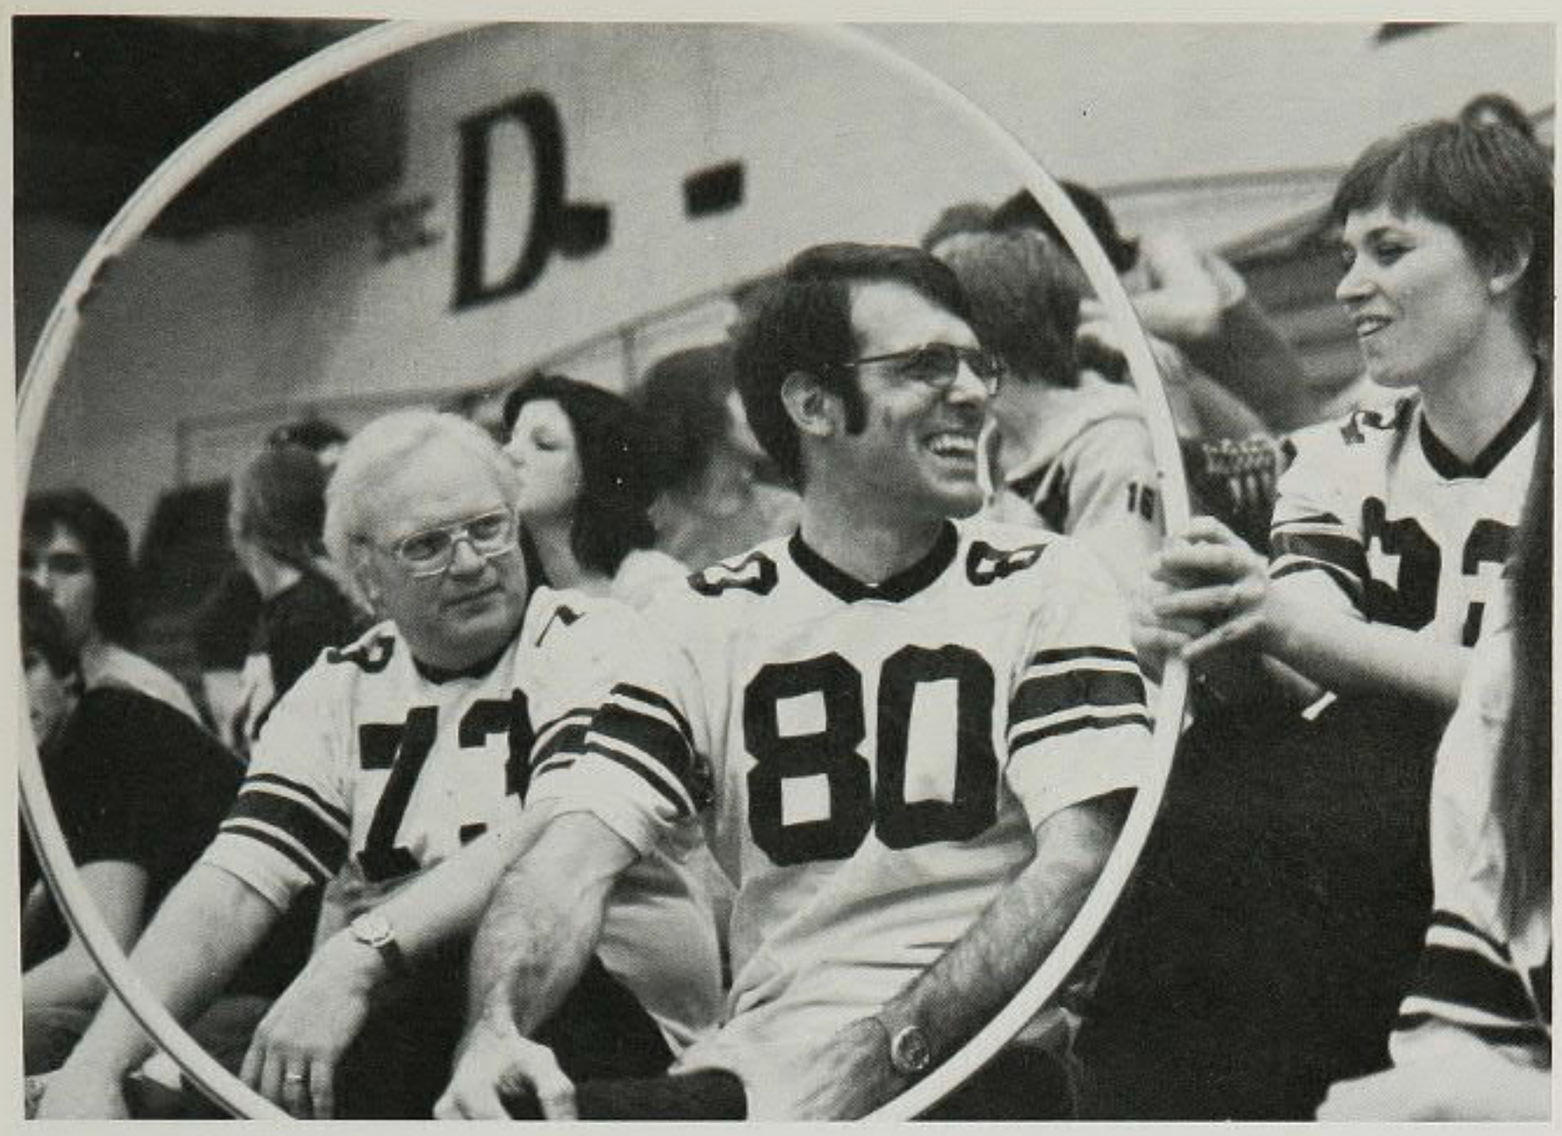
What would it be like to have to be eighteen years of age with a driver's license before you could go out on a date, with the main dating places being movies, night clubs and elegant restaurants? This is one of the dating customs of Brazilians Joao Caram and Carlos Rebelo and Miguel Guggiari of Paraguay, all second semester foreign students.

While visiting the United States for six months, Joao stayed with Sue Hale and her family, Carlos with Becki Arndt and family and Miguel with Lori Mynsberge and family. These foreign students attended Penn High and lived with their respective families through the Youth for Understanding program.

Opposite Foreign students Miguel Guggiari, Joao Caram and Carlos Rebelo were welcomed second semester.







A F S Olympics draws crowds

You Got Leggs . . . but how many pair of pantyhose can you put on those legs in one minute? Penn students and administration worked at pulling on the most pantyhose in the American Field Service (AFS) Olympic Games held at Penn high school, February 24 and 25.

Olympic teams consisted of six members, three girls, three guys and one alternate, each participating in spoof events. Prior to the olympics, teams obtained pledges from local businesses, promises for one dollar per point. Money raised will be used in three different ways: for scholarships, short term exchanges, and our foreign exchange students' individual needs. Members of the teams were required to wear an arm band or T-shirt identifying them with the real or fictitious country they represented. Field games, held Tuesday evening, opened the AFS Olympics. Events viewed by spectators were an egg toss, consisting of two members tossing an egg the greatest distance without breaking it, a marshmallow treat, where team members try to consume all the marshmallows in the shortest time, and a tug-of-war. Wednesday evening included the games in the pool, featuring the team event kick board relay, where flutter kick only was allowed and a kick board was used as the baton to be handed off. Everyone kept a close watch on the scores knowing what tough competition they were up against.

Capturing first place in the AFS Olympics was Swaziland, second place was Poland, Mononucleosis won third place, Swedish Sweat Hogs placed fourth and Austria was fifth.

Killers pedal on to victory

Speed, teamwork and pedal power gave Mr. Wally Yeoman's Kross Kountry Killers the edge to capture their second consecutive victory in the 15th annual Little 500. Team members were Murray Seaman, Jim Byrd, Mark Anderson and Dave Snyder. Mr. Tony Portolese's Movin' Mafia placed second by merely 200 yards.

Constituting the starting lineup were nine four-member teams with alternate riders on some teams.

All team members were required to wear long pants and long sleeve shirts with matching colored T-shirts over them. A Lemans start began the race, with beginning competitors riding a minimum of two laps before an exchange.

Receiving pole position (a total of each team member's individual qualifying time), was Mr. Robert Miller's "Millers," consisting of Greg Cunningham, Karl Hartzke, Dan Risner and John Smith. The fastest individual time and the second fastest in the 15 years of Little 500 was set by Greg Cunningham with a time of 37.1 seconds. Unquestionably the competition was by far closer than in previous years.

Administration guides schools

Making Penn a friendlier place is the goal of the administration. The "open door" policy, which started in 1972, was originated when administrators felt they needed to take time to talk to students. This, they felt, would provide the best opportunity, but the program was discontinued when construction started.

This year one day each month, the three building administrators, Mr. Lambert, Mr. Keppler and Mr. Quimby, were available if any student wished to talk during the lunch periods. Students asked questions or made suggestions about the school. They also were free to make any appropriate comment they chose. The idea of open door came about because the opportunity was open to all students.

With each building administrator newly established in a modern office, Mr. Lambert in the main office, Mr. Keppler on the upper floor of the IMC, and Mr. Quimby just off the lobby, each was ready to discuss with and help any interested student.

U.S. History makes changes

The emphasis in Social Studies last year was on individual achievement and study. Each student had his own choice of assignment, with many options available.

Another novel mark in the department was the use of books other than texts, especially in the U.S. History college prep courses. Classes discussed readings and listened to lectures. Students then were offered a choice of different assignments.

The bicentennial made its influence felt on the history classes as they discussed the course of our nation from the Founding Father to the present.

English adds to its program

Continual change seems to be the norm of Penn's English department. This year's department worked to fit the student needs and interests by offering more choices to the individual, and letting him decide what would benefit him most.

A new section was added to the department with seven classrooms. New equipment and modern decor complete the enlargement. Four new teachers are enjoying the department.

Changes in the curriculum include a more comprehensive reading program, a speech team developing forensics and debate, and the hiring of specially trained teachers in these areas. The curriculum grew from three to thirty-eight classes to choose from.

Art students developing new freedom

Art took on a new freedom this year. Students were taught to develop their own styles and ideas. Instructors Mr. Mike Leippert and Mr. John Rafert helped young artists with their style development and self-expression through demonstrations, examples and explanations of new techniques.

"I think the quality of student work is improving," commented Mr. Leippert.

This year in independent art study and advanced art class, students experimented in different areas such as drawing, painting, pen and ink, pottery and crafts. Students were mostly on their own, choosing which areas they wanted to work in each nine weeks. Spring activities included a field trip to the Chicago Art Institute and the annual art show where students displayed their talent. Everybody in the art department displayed at least one project.

A new $5,000 kiln was added to the department along with new potters' wheels, easels, and regular artists' supplies such as paint, paint brushes, paper, clay, leather, pastels, charcoal, etc.

Disciplining each person to constantly work guarantees improvement and artwork to be proud of.

Languages speaking to themselves

Parlez-vous francais . . . ? Oral practice is the key to good pronunciation of foreign languages as any French, German or Spanish student knows.

This year new equipment was added to the department. Now helping students with their pronunciation is a language machine. Students of all three languages put on a $210 headset and listened to tapes of whatever lesson they were on. They just had to choose a channel. Students could talk orally and privately and never bother their neighbors.

There are the memorization and tests too, but along with the hard work there is fun, as the students found out at the foreign language picnic and tennis tournament in October, 1975. Everyone who attended was entertained by a fun tournament, bonfire, and lots of food.

Math, science solve mysteries

Dissected frogs, atoms, chemicals and rocks were studied, analyzed, mixed and explored throughout the year in the science department.

Students learned and interpreted scientific theories. Young biologists examined cells, plants, and frogs. Student physicists and chemists experimented with chemicals and molecular properties, while high school geologists explored the earth's surface.

Individual and partner study procedures were common in most of the classes with each student progressing at his own speed.

Instructors in the science department guided students to a better understanding and more interesting look into science. "The Atomic World," a presentation from Purdue University, entertained many science students with a demonstration of the mysterious atom. Geometric figures, algebra equations, and complicated trigonometry and calculus problems were tackled by math students last year. Many were solved with the help of demonstrations in the department headed by Mr. Frank Matthews.

Marching band performs at Disney World

Penn high's choirs and bands participated in a successful season of activities, contests and festivals. This year, candy sale profits were used for senior awards and a spring vacation trip for the marching band to Disney World, where they were invited to perform.

The choirs and marching band also joined together for a superb halftime show at the Muncie Northside football game, October 24, 1975. The Marching Kingsmen went to the Northern Indiana School Band, Orchestra, Vocal, Association (NISBOVA) contest in the fall and received a 1st division rating. Choral ensembles and solos participated at NISBOVA and state contest in late winter.

The chamber choir performed at Grissom and Schmucker middle schools in December, and along with the jazz band, gave a show to the elementary schools in March.

Many rehearsals and practices took place after school hours and during free time to prepare to perfection for both band and choir members.

Physical education classes dancing their way to fitness

"Doing your own thing" was the mood experienced by most health and P.E. students this year.

Sophomores did their own thing by picking study units of their choices after completing the required five.

Advanced health became a seminar-oriented program. Seniors were involved in activities including visitations, career and volunteer work.

Physical education was unique this year, especially for sophomores. A variety of co-ed activities including bowling, volleyball, swimming, badminton, gymnastics, softball, fitness, dancing, recreational games, golf, tennis and archery were offered. Students were allowed to choose from these areas to suit their best abilities which made them feel relaxed in gym class.

Home economics was a special type of thing. Capsules, a form of individualized instruction, gave students the option of working in areas they wanted to. Classes using the capsules were consumer education, housing and child development.

Office work facilitates job previews

This year the students going into future secretarial jobs and office work could fulfill their responsibilities by spending a day in offices for CPA work, accounting and practical work.

Students in business law observed live courtroom procedures. Another business program involved typing checks for clerical jobs, and sending out purchase orders.

Classrooms expanded last year due to the larger enrollment, and received office furniture, typing machines and adding machines.

Vocational art classes add new programs

Metals, one of the new classes in exploratory industrial arts, worked with styrofoam molds to cast metals. This class was offered to students with no previous experience in vocational arts. Next year the vocational arts department hopes to offer a wider variety of skills to students interested in persuing a skilled position after graduation.

Graphic arts also underwent some change by working exclusively with sophomores. The arrival of a Vega in trade auto created opportunities for learning for both students and teachers.

Reflection shows evidence of growth in all areas of the vocational arts program which promises a wide spectrum of opportunities for the interested student.

Vocational skills offered at EACC

From secretaries to auto mechanics the Career Center offers practical experience for students at the junior-senior level.

Cosmetology was a popular program for girls last year. Guys favored advanced machine shop, heating, air conditioning and graphic arts.

Applications to the Career Center are made in February each year. Most programs are organized for a two-hour block of time.

Penn high has 38 students attending the Career Center. While the PHM school corporation pays all of the tuition, students must provide their own transportation to and from either the morning or afternoon sessions.

Penn is one of the feeder schools in this area along with Goshen, Concord, Nappanee and Mishawaka. As Mr. Gilbert explains, "There are some very good opportunities and the training is designed to aid in future employment in the job market."

Combination of talents builds house

Six acres of land ready to be developed await the building trades classes. Last year 19 students built the first house of nine in the new subdivision, Kingsmen Acres.

The tri-level a fully carpeted house has four bedrooms, a bath and a half and a family room with a fireplace. The housing class designed the drapes in each room.

After studying blueprints for 2-3 weeks, students began construction, setting forms, pouring concrete and building the shell.

The 1974-75 architectural drafting class designed the house. Bathroom cabinets were built by woodshop students, and the metal rail was constructed by the welding shop students. The housing class coordinated the colors and the business class took care of the clerical work.

Counselors-taking time to understand

This year at Penn, guidance counselors were equipped and ready to handle about any service students might need. Activities and services included sophomore orientation, achievement and scholarship testing, and summer school as well as supplying career information. The Trust Company Safe, a well established place where students may go to share their problems with other students, was under the direction of Mrs. Ronchetti. The Safe and guidance department were always available to build bridges of communication, help students cope with everyday problems, and in general, create a better atmosphere at Penn in which to teach and learn.

Secretaries face everyday challenges

Starting early in the morning finding substitute teachers, and ending in the late afternoon with the next day's announcements are part of a secretary's usual day. Each secretary and student assistant copes with daily problems as well as the routine activities such as appointments, student schedules and report cards. Although each secretary has a special job, each contributes in a special way to keep the school running efficiently.

Librarians adjust to new surroundings

Librarians and students are enjoying a newly constructed IMC this year. The octagon shaped IMC offers the kind of flexibility and variety of materials which the classroom cannot. The IMC includes large and small seminar rooms, a well equipped media lab and lounge areas for reading. Along with typing areas and a film preview room, each teacher has an individual work station on the upper level of the IMC. There is also new, modern furniture and individual study carrels for student use.

A change in the IMC procedure includes an IMC card to check out materials. Both librarians and student assistants work very hard to keep the IMC running in the efficient way for which it was designed.

Efficiency is their goal

Modern facilities in a new kitchen gave cafeteria personnel the efficiency to prepare over 1500 lunches a day this year. Among the new facilities is a machine that produces 1200 cookies a minute. But preparing food is not all there is to it. In addition to cooking is the cleanup of all the equipment after the lunch hour each day.

Included in the cafeteria operations are the custodians, playing an important part in the upkeep of our school night and day. There is always someone here before, during and after hours making sure we have a school that we can be proud of.

ORGANIZATIONS

Choir performance reflects hard work

The 1975-76 chamber choir, dressed in red, white and blue did a tremendous job all year giving close to 30 concerts.

Faced with three returning members, Mr. Holaway set out with a seemingly impossible task of equaling last year's choir. With a hard working group of juniors and seniors practicing at 6:45 every morning, they highlighted their year's work with an all day Christmas presentation to the employees of Uniroyal, including 100 or more songs in 22 stops. The Pops concert with the jazz band and the spring choral concert were also highlights this year.

During the course of the year the choir took time out of their busy schedule to participate in the district and state NISBOVA contest and entered in the madrigal competition.

"It has been an enjoyable year for me and I'm looking forward to next year," stated Mr. Holaway.

Concert musicians gain experience

Largest of the four choral groups, concert choir is also the most experienced. Its members all auditioned for director C. LaMar Holaway before being placed in the class.

The 80 singers also spent more time performing than either girls choir or Singing Kingsmen. They started off the year with a halftime show at the Penn-Lafayette-Harrison football game. At Christmas the group sang at both Schmucker and Grissom in addition to being featured at the Christmas concert. Along with the rest of the country the concert choir was caught up in the bicentennial spirit and presented a moving concert which included a finale number with the Pennettes and symphonic band.

A Sacred concert, which inspired the audience, was next on the agenda. The choir ended February with a very successful showing at state NISBOVA contest at Butler University.

They also participated in the six school choral festival at Mishawaka high school. Concert choir ended its year with a brilliant performance at the spring concert, and at Commencement in June.

Opposite Even though it came at a hectic time of year, the concert choir impressed the audience with music of the revolutionary era at the Bicentennial concert.

Girls' choirs show potential

Girls' choir, which meets both third and fifth hours, teaches the basic fundamentals of rhythm, sight reading and dynamics.

The girls' first performance was at the highly successful Christmas concert where they performed four numbers, "Nativity of Christ", "Japanese Christmas Carol", "Miracle of Bethlehem", and "Pin a Star on a Twinkling Tree".

In February several soloists placed well in the district NISBOVA contest and three ensembles received first place ratings, enabling them to participate in state contest at Butler University.

Other activities that the girls were involved in included a six-school choral festival, an all day affair at Mishawaka high school and the spring concert, which was by far the biggest performance of the year.

Top Warm-ups are an important part of daily classroom activities.

Small in number, mighty in sound

The Singing Kingsmen, which were no longer a group in 1974, were back this year and better than ever.

Starting out the year as a group of 12 inexperienced sophomores, they accompanied the Concert Choir during their halftime presentation and performed two numbers at the Christmas concert.

"Tremendous spirit and their love to perform had to be their best qualities," commented Mr. Holaway. To this you would have to agree if you saw any of their showings.

Sophomore Mark Walerko believed that this year helped him to have the courage to sing in front of people and have fun doing it.

The boys' choir participated in the bicentennial concert, six school choral festival and the spring concert. They also received a second place rating in group one competition at NISBOVA.

Band receives first at NISBOVA

Waiting to go on stage, a seemingly forever wait until all of a sudden you're rushing to get the equipment in place. Striving to hit every note, playing everything exactly as you were told, and knowing how you practiced for endless hours. When it's over you just know you did well.

Being in jazz band demands a lot, giving up a homework assignment to practice or even some extra time that you could have spent working for money instead of going to rehearsal for Mr. Rudolph.

This year the band took part in two contests; NISBOVA, where they received a first division rating, and Elmhurst in the spring. They also gave four concerts, the winter band concert, the Pops Concert, the jazz concert, and the spring band concert. They also put out a record in March and May. The number of graduating seniors this year is only three, which means that next year's jazz band will be better than ever.

Concert, symphonic bands impressive

"Are there any size 36 coats left?" was a frequent question asked the day uniforms were issued to band members, as 150 symphonic and concert band students were fitted into 130 identical uniforms.

To start the concert season, a fall concert was presented including both symphonic and concert bands. Displaying the complexity and beauty of classical music the symphonic band played, "A Festive Overture". The concert band also proved their talent to bring out a lighthearted number, "The Sandpaper Ballet". The symphonic band, accompanied by the concert choir, didn't fail to fill the Penn auditorium with the "76" spirit in their glorious bicentennial concert. They featured songs such as "Gold Bug" and "A Tribute to Stephen Foster".

In April, the bands presented their annual spring concert with the symphonic and concert band displaying their musical talents.

Below Director Keith Rudolph leads the band in "A Tribute to Stephen Foster," a clever arrangement of Foster's immortal tunes.

Determination key to success

Determination and perfection have been the keys to their success this year, as the Penn Marching Kingsmen have consistently received "superior" ratings at the NISBOVA marching contests.

During the past two years they have placed 5th and 10th in the Indiana All-State Football Marching Contest in competition with top bands from all of Indiana.

These dedicated students have drilled long hours in August and through the fall days, in preparation for football halftime shows and NISBOVA Marching Contest. The Marching Kingsmen are one of the few competitive bands that present a home program. They have also obtained a first division rating for their outstanding work in the NISBOVA Marching Contest.

Highlighting the year's events and performances the Penn Marching Kingsmen were selected to perform at Disney World during spring break, after a tape and photograph of the band playing were submitted along with a list of their previous achievements. Plans for the trip included the Marching Kingsmen playing in a parade, spending two extra days at Disney World and a trip to Cape Kennedy.

Sole twirler adds spice

Pom-Pon girls provide entertainment for thousands of halftime fans.

This year the Pennettes accompanied the Marching Kingsmen in numerous halftime shows and contests. They provided extra spirit for the fans and were an aid to the cheerleaders. The flag corp provided order to the band and also recognition for the school. Sole twirler Barb Aldrich added spice to the group.

Cheerleaders tirelessly support our team

Cheerleaders are one of the main ingredients of a team. This year's squads gave all they had to provide inspiration and enthusiasm to Penn fans and athletes. They kept the crowds alive through rain, freezing cold, defeat and followed the basketball and football teams to places like Goshen, Huntington, Valparaiso and Indianapolis. Like the athletes, they, too, worked out beginning in the spring by exercising to keep in shape. During the summer they gave their time to camp, learning new cheers and ways to make the crowd respond. Dedicated, each of the squad members kept this rigorous pace throughout the year. This year's varsity squad were all returning letterwinners. As leaders, these girls were an example of spirit and drive for the entire school.

Athletes drive for physical prowess

Striving to be the best, Letterwinners are those outstanding athletes, men and women, who have contributed the most to school sports. Eligibility for membership in the club is determined by lettering in football, basketball, tennis, track, volleyball, or one of the many other sports available to the high school athlete.

Before joining the elite membership, aspirants must participate in many sunrise drills, take their share of bumps and bruises, cope with referees, and most of all, learn how to handle defeat.

There is also a pleasant side to athletic competition. Letterwinners have the assorted overzealous mothers on the sidelines who donate cookies and a lot of love, cheerleaders, understanding coaches, and of course, winning.

In short, to athletes, winning isn't everything it's the only thing.

FCA, AFS members remain active

"The purpose of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes is to expose athletes and coaches to the way of following "Christ," explained captain Greg Cunningham.

With huddle groups in junior high through pro ranks, the FCA is a nationwide organization that sponsors national camps where athletes talk, pray, participate in athletics and listen to speakers, who are usually members of college and pro FCA huddles.

The Penn huddle hopes to raise money to send kids to these national camps. With this being their first year, the Penn huddle has focused their fellowship meetings on club organization, discussions and future goals.

Although Penn's FCA huddle is basically for athletes, it welcomes anyone to its meetings, because great emphasis is placed on Christian fellowship rather than athletics.

To help get the Penn huddle oriented, the Mishawaka huddle combined with Penn for a fellowship meeting in the fall. Sponsors were Miss Hahn, Mr. Yeoman and Mr. Rog.

Once larger in membership than any other club at Penn, the AFS club has now been declining rapidly in size. Therefore, many of the projects and responsibilities of the club have been carried out this year by a group of enthusiastic adults.

It is through the AFS club and adult members that we have enjoyed our exchange student, Giacomo Ricca, from Savanna, Italy, and have also sent our students abroad.

Even though many of the AFS club projects have been turned over to the adult group, the AFS club did sponsor the olympics, AFS style.

Students and teachers participated in everything from the pantyhose pull to the egg toss. All participating teams represented a country and obtained monetary pledges from local businesses.

Thespians assume multiple roles

Each of us is, in a sense, a multiple personality; we change our behavior to suit different needs. Sometimes, of course, we find it difficult to keep up the farce. Take this difficulty, multiply it by five to ten people, add specific things to be said, movements to be made, coordination of several people at once, stage design, lighting, and you have an idea of the difficulty of putting on a stage production. This is the job of the Thespians.

"Yes, Beulah?"

"There's a—person just come, says Mrs. Hampton wants to see her. A Mrs. Sparker."

"I don't know any Mrs. Sparker." Silence.

"I don't know any Mrs. Sparker."

"All right, let's start again, act two, scene one."

The rehearsal goes on. The actors and actresses may grumble now, but when the time comes to give that one line that they've always missed in front of 900 people, they'll bless the endless, repetitive practice.

Notwithstanding the best-laid plans of mice and men, however, something always breaks; somebody always trips or forgets a line; and one of the props is always missing ten minutes before show time. The pressure is intense, but the actors always manage to cover what errors there are.

It's opening night. The cast is pacing nervously about the Green Room, repeating over and over again those lines which they have said in their sleep for two months. Ms. Wendt calls them to order; they form a circle. She says a few chosen words about the hard work that everyone has put in, and gives them her honest assurances that all will go well. An emotion-laden silence envelops them for a moment.

"Give 'em h—!"

Scholars address serious issues

Speech is an individual event that pits the speaking, acting, or even researching abilities of one student against a host of others from schools across the state.

Penn's leading scorer this year was Dennis Dale, who has held a slim lead over the rest of his teammates for most of the season. Right at his heels were Rick Wayne, and the president of the team, Sandy Sanders. Not too far behind was Cricket Boyer, Tina Card, Curtis Freese, Cheril Kurtz, Roxie Kurtz, Jeff Wiessler and Linda Wiessler.

Debate has been resurrected at Penn by new coach William Heimann.

Mr. Heimann, who is also the speech coach, and a former debater himself, looks hopefully to the future for renewed interest in what has been called "glorified argumentation".

But debate was more than mere argument for arguments sake. Much of the actual work was devoted to extensive research of the debate topic. If speaking ability is important, Mr. Heimann feels that research is even more so. "Research is usually where you win or lose," he stated.

This year's topic was "Resolved, that the development and allocation of scarce world resources should be controlled by an international organization".

Jane Lenczowski and Wendy Bucher took affirmative angles and set out to find evidence (another important factor in debate) that the world should share and share alike. Meanwhile, Rick Wayne and Kevin Wilkins searched for evidence that the world was fine the way it is.

A debate round consists of an affirmative speech given by one team member, followed by a negative speech by one member of the opposing team. Next, teammate number two goes into action in the second affirmative speech, afterwhich the second member of the negative team gives his views. Now throw in a chance to play Perry Mason (cross examination), allow yourself time for rebuttal speeches, and you have a debate.

Pupil initiative comes back to life

Near the end of "To Sir, With Love", Edward Braithwaite tells us that his graduating students were "poised on the banks of the river a bit hesitant to take the plunge, but not afraid of the stream itself".

At Penn, students in the business club try to learn a little bit about that river of life before taking the plunge. Through trips to area businesses, students are given a chance to familiarize themselves with the procedures of business. For instance, the club toured Associates, and envisioned a trip to the Michiana College of Commerce.

The club, sponsored by Mrs. Anderson, enjoyed a congenial camaraderie, with recreational activities like tobogganing and a party at Mrs. Anderson's. However, fellowship isn't everything, as the record of the business club over the past year or so all to clearly shows. But this trend toward inactivity is being reversed, with a complete student-directed reorganization of the club. With Mrs. Anderson providing the ideas and the students implementing them, the club hopes to regain its old vitality.

Quite often the question, what purpose does the honor roll serve? comes up in the minds of many students during their high school years. Sometimes in the busy year we never take the time to honor students for academic ability.

This year Penn had a new way of selecting students for the National Honor Society. Instead of being inducted with just a 6.0 average, students applied. A list was sent to all the teachers with the inductees' names on it and the faculty members who have had the students rate them on a scale from 0 to 8 on leadership, character and service.

Though the name "honor student" or "honor society" may not be appropriate for the name of the club, Mr. Diener stated, "It may not be the best name but it's the best I've ever heard. Until someone comes up with something better it will have to do."

Inexpert staff gains experience

Some obscure caveman started it with a scrawl on the wall of a cavern. By recording an armadillo hunt that he found particularly interesting, he began a tradition that has continued for thousands of years, that of informing the public. He probably never realized what he had done, that generations later his primitive splashes of color would evolve into a huge business, an important part of our daily lives, a strong influence on the patterns of thought of whole nations—and the bane of a few million journalism students. The public's right to know is its privilege but the newsman's obligation, and anyone who has ever worked within the media will tell you that putting out a periodical is an incessant frantic scramble.

So it is with the Pennant staff. There is a sense of urgency that permeates the entire operation; writing stories, taking pictures, developing, cropping, retyping, typesetting, paste-up, repairing oddly cut and stepped on paste-up stories, until the finished sheets are delivered to the printer.

Fatiguing? Nerve-wracking? Of course —these people aren't machines. Generations of desperate newsmen have cursed that long dead caveman, but if you catch one of them during one of their rare moments of calm, they'll admit that they're proud to be his descendants.

Bittersweet staff recreates memories

Six p.m. "What do you mean, we've sent in page one-seventy six? I've got it here!" A desperate section editor implores a photographer, "You must have a picture of the LGI somewhere!" He gestures mutely at a huge stack of proofs; she shakes her head in despair and begins to search through them. "Come on children, the deadline's tonight", Mrs. Schalliol coaxes. Everyone turns to sneer at her, a moment of laughter, then everyone's back to work.

The work? An attempt to capture a school year on paper, a permanent record of Penn high during nine months of its history. What these people are making will endure for years, will probably become a treasured possession of almost every graduate and student of Penn. They are fashioning a true "memory bank". Frozen for all time on its pages are the precious moments, information, and faces that will serve to recall a fleeting slice of time, the priceless year of high school. Years later, perhaps, the voices will be forgotten, the memories will fade, this year will be buried in the depths of remembering. Then, dig out that musty, yellowed yearbook, page through those long-ago good times. The people have changed, aged, but they live on in your mind just as they were in 1975. Copywriters, photographers, layout editors, and, of course, our fearless leader, all think it's well worth their effort.

Nine o'clock p.m. A grin slowly spreads over Mrs. Schalliol's face as she contemplates her staff. "All right, kiddies —" Four dogged workers wearily raise their heads from their work. "Let's take time out for the Yearbook Pledge". Suddenly none of them are tired, and their voices echo down the halls of the deserted school. "I love yearbook! Unh, unh, unh!"

Kingsmen ranked no. 1 in final AP poll

What can be said about the 1975 football Kingsmen? That they had the first 10-0 season in Penn's history? That they held the number one position in the state of Indiana? . . . A lot more.

Three years ago, after too many disappointing seasons, Penn desperately looked for a coach who could turn their football program around. They chose from Ohio Chris Geesman, a man who asked that he be given just three years to make a winner out of Penn. He did.

Geesman's first season came out 5-5. His second year proved a winning season with a record of 8-2.

As has been said before, the 1975 season did not start in July when the team reported for practice. It began when the '74 season ended. The Kingsmen worked hard all winter. What they lacked in size, they made up for in heart. When the 1975 season started, no one worried much about the Kingsmen. They weren't ranked. But they were ready.

The season opened against Mishawaka, a cross-city rival, and then ranked number 5 in the state. The Cavemen took the first taste of Penn's tenacious defense. The Kingsmen took them by surprise, 27-0, holding the Cavemen to a meager 58 yards total offense, a record.

After shutting out their next three rivals, the Kingsmen took on LaFayette Harrison, unranked, but not to be taken lightly. It was a hard hitting, defensive game, and with just a little more than a minute left, Harrison led 7-0. But the Kingsmen weren't ready to give up. On a bomb from junior quarterback Dennis Groning, Jim Bregenzer took it all the way to lead the game into overtime. Penn took the ball first, and Mike Sharpe scored. Again it was Penn's defense that had the job to do. They held the line, and on fourth down, Mark Bock's interception in the end zone insured the victory.

They surmounted LaSalle, and played Elkhart Central for the first time. Again, Penn's defense proved impenetrable.

Monday morning, Penn was in an uproar. The Kingsmen were rated number one for the first time ever. When "the Geeser" was asked how it felt to be the coach of the number one team in the state, he said, "I'm glad for the number one ranking, more for the players than me, because they worked hard for it. But also quite a bit more pressure has been added, because people expect quite a bit more out of a team."

And the Kingsmen gave more. With a number one ranking behind them, they took on St. Joe, perhaps their most important contest. On homecoming night, with 7,000 fans in the stands and lining the field, the "Gees-men" proved themselves number one by defeating the Indians 14-12. Penn led 7-0 until the fourth quarter when St. Joe scored, but the extra point was blocked. Penn and St. Joe took turns scoring, and St. Joe missed a two-point conversion to wrap it up.

After dropping Muncie North 13-0, the Kingsmen faced what Geesman called "a must game" against one of Indiana's largest schools, Indianapolis North Central. At stake was Penn's number one ranking, a perfect 9-0 record, and most important, a state playoff spot.

"The Wild Bunch," a well-earned nickname for Penn's strong defense, were wild on Halloween night, as they denied the Panthers more than six points, a touchdown which came on a long bomb. The offense controlled the ball most of the game, and the jubilant Kingsmen made a first in Penn history, with a perfect 10-0 season record. They had earned a place in the 1975 state playoffs.

Penn now faced Valparaiso, number 4, and with an offense which was the only one of its kind in the state. Several costly errors in the first quarter let the Vikings jump ahead, 21-0. After the half, with the score at 24-0, the Kingsmen came alive and scored 19 straight points. The Vikings disappointed Penn with a TD that probably clinched the game. A pass from Groning for a touchdown would have made it 31-26, but a penalty against Penn nullified the score.

The Kingsmen held their heads high. Other than being Penn's first number one team and capturing their first perfect season record, they set numerous other records, virtually rewriting the book defensively. Senior linebackers Bob Nickel and Randy Patterson had a season total of 226 tackle points each, a first. Senior Bill Holowatuk had nine interceptions and earned a unanimous All State, first team title. "The Wild Bunch" held their opponents for a season total of 39 points, and had four shutouts in a row.

Hopes crushed

From the very start people were expecting a real battle. Penn 10-0 on the season, ranked number 1 in the state, took the state's second best defense who had yielded a mere 39 points all season up against number 4 Valparaiso, who was also 10-0 and had the state's second best offense which averaged approximately 33 points a game.

Maybe it was the pressure; maybe it was the untimely fumbles and penalties. Whatever it was, Penn found themselves holding the short end of the stick in their 31-19 state championship playoff game against the Valparaiso Vikings.

Despite the uncertainty of the game until late in the day, more than 8,300 enthusiastic fans turned out to see a heralded clash of the unbeatens.

You would expect the score to be closer and for a while Kingsmen fans hoped as they fought back from a 24-6 halftime deficit to close within five at 24-19 with almost 10½ minutes to go in the game.

But it was not to be as Penn's offense stalled and a stiff wind blew a punt short at the Kingsmen's 48. The Vikings proceeded to march in for an insurance score, earning themselves the right to play Carmel at home for the state title.

Penn harriers do best ever

In perhaps their finest season ever the Penn Kingsmen harriers finished at 16-2 in dual meet competition and 7-1 in conference meets.

Their efforts earned them a fine second place finish in conference standings. Their only conference loss was to unbeaten Elkhart Central who finished first and 8-0 in the NIC. Penn's other loss was to a strong Goshen squad.

Three of Penn's 16 victories were by perfect scores of 15-50. In cross country the lowest score wins.

Next year's outlook for a cross country competitor looks bright indeed with this year's MVP sophomore Mike Haag and most improved, junior George Bachman returning.

One of this year's brightest was Mike Haag who set a school record against LaSalle in a blitzing 12:27. He was Penn's top finisher in every meet and had an excellent point average of 1.00.

In competition other than dual meets, Penn finished fifth in the New Prairie Invitational and fifth at the LaPorte Invitational.

With their score of 119 points, Penn finished third in sectionals, and 8th at regionals with 214 points.

Returning lettermen make future promising

With only two seniors on the entire team, coach Bob Brady's tennis squad was young and a bit inexperienced this year as they ended their season at 4-11.

Steve Bigler, who was 4-13 for the year and seeded first in singles play, and doubles player Tom Henry, 4-10, are the only graduating seniors on the team.

Sophomore Dave Fritz, voted most valuable at the Fall Sports Banquet, was 4-11 and seeded second. Fellow classmate Ken Katz ended his season at 0-5 in single action.

Juniors on the squad were Mike Christofeno, voted most improved and next year's captain at 6-6, and Jerry Sanders with an 0-2 singles mark.

Seeded first in doubles were Jerry Sanders and Mike Chrisofeno who played three matches and fell in all three contests. Sanders also teamed with Katz and compiled a 2-7 record. Bob Hatfield and Tom Henry managed a 3-10 mark.

There will be six returning players to next year's team plus a fine B-team.

"Penn has the best young tennis players ever returning," commented Coach Brady.

Season peppered by co-ed teams

Rookie Coach Diane Pietrzak and company found a definite new twist in this year's 1975-76 girls' volleyball program. Both Clay and Adams had co-ed teams.

Clay had one male competitor while Adams filled two spots with boys. Ms.Pietrzak commented that both games were forfeited.

Winding up with a 3-8 win-loss record over all, the girls were never outclassed completely. Their worst loss was at the hands of Riley where they scored a total of 7 points in two contests.

Defeats were dealt to St. Mary's with scores of 15-10, 8-15 and in overtime, 17-15. Penn's second victim was Washington 15-3, 6-15 and 15-8. In their first sectional battle, Penn outpointed the Goshen Redskins 15-10, 10-13 (time ran out before either team scored 15 points) and 15-9. Elkhart Central, who defeated Penn in the first match of the season 12-15 and 11-15, once again beat a highly spirited Kingsmen team, 9-15, in the opening game; Penn won the second, 15-8, before losing the finale, 8-15.

Junior Kelly Adelsperger was voted "most valuable" with classmate Tami Greenawalt capturing the "most improved" award.

Penguins take third in state

To pick out a highlight in the 1975-76 girls' swim season would be a sticky one indeed. There was the girls' record of 9-3, their best ever. There could also be the seven sectional records set by the Penn girls or their third place finish in the state competition.

How about their third place finish in one of the toughest state sectionals? Or it could be their taking of all but 30 of the possible 168 firsts during the season.

Besides the teams' highlights, there were many superb individual performances. Freshman Deb Thompson captured a state title in the 200 yard freestyle and fourth place in the 400 yard freestyle. Cindie Bartlett also turned in some excellent swimming with a second and a fourth. And Linda Smits' third and fourth added a lot to the Penguins' cause. Other state competitors were Mona Seaman, Jamie Mittiga and Chris Presnell.

Four of the six swimmers set records in sectionals. Linda Smits, Deb Thompson, Mona Seaman and Cindie Bartlett combined to set a record in the 200 yard medley relay. Smits, Thompson and Seaman all recorded two other sectional records.

After losing two of their first three meets, the Kingsmen girls reeled off seven straight victories before being upset in one of their final meets. This gave the girls a fine 9-3 record under coach Chris Preisinger.

Swimmers stroke against the best

Falling one victory short of a .500 season, Coach George Green's Kingsmen swimmers had a respectable season. Most of the team's losses were to powerful teams with their worst defeat during the regular season coming from the Riley Wildcats, 137½-34½.

Penn, who competed in the city meet by invitation, performed well but could only take fourth in the six-team field. Riley, Adams and Clay outdistanced Penn with Marian and LaSalle bringing up the rear.

In the NIC Conference meet, which precedes sectionals and is also the testing grounds for the sectional hopefuls, saw Penn place fourth in the eight-team field.

Donn Spilman, Penn's highest finisher in the city meet with a third in the 50 yard freestyle, was once again the NIC meet leader, with his second place finish in the same race. Spilman's third in the 100 yard butterfly, Steve Walter's sixth in the diving, Jeff Jozwiak's sixth in the 100 yard backstroke, and the fifth place finish by the 400 yard freestyle medley were the only other Penn places in the top positions.

On the basis of their sectional performances, Steve Walters, Rob Rantz, and Donn Spillman all participated in the state swim meet. Although none placed in the competition, they each did well. Walters in diving, Rantz in the 500 yard freestyle, and Spillman in the 100 yard butterfly will all be lost due to graduation.

Kingsmen place five in sectionals

While only advancing one wrestler to the state competition, the 1975-76 Kingsmen grapplers placed five in the sectionals. Kent Schmeltz was the only one to survive regionals as Scott Covert, Mike Christofeno, Dan Hoffman and Greg Cunningham were all defeated in early competition.

Senior Schmeltz handed #1seeded Larry Hall of Mishawaka his first defeat on the way to regional wrestling. Hall had defeated Schmeltz three times in the regular season.

Juniors Christofeno and Covert were seeded first along with senior Cunningham before their upsets.

While this year's varsity squad compiled a very respectable record of 6-3-1, with their only losses being to LaSalle, Mishawaka and Goshen, the B-team, coached by Wally Yoeman, certainly added to coach Dave Geyer's hopes for improvement next year as they were undefeated and captured firsts in two area B-team tournaments.

Big wins balance mediocre start

A lot of changes dotted the 1975-76 edition of the Penn basketball team: new coaches, new opponents, and a new holiday tourney.

Steve Yoder, former head caoch at Plymouth high school, took the reins at the beginning of the year. Rick Bowen assisted him along with B-team coach Bruce Coffman.

All was not the proverbial bed of roses as Yoder saw himself faced with problems from the start. Penn dropped their first four mainly because of the team's inconsistent tendencies. The Kingsmen played great ball with the tougher teams and lost, but couldn't keep it going against the lesser foes, losing these also.

All coaches must recognize the need for change. Hoping for improvement, Yoder elevated three junior varstiy members which resulted in back-to-back wins over tough Goshen, St. Joe, Marian and Gary West squads, with a 10 point loss to powerful Elkhart Central sandwiched between the double wins.

While it was a year of changes, it was also a year of heartbreaks. The Kingsmen had suffered two one-point losses and one by just a basket with two games remaining in the season. Also in the hard knock category would have to be the loss of senior Scott Laidig for the entire first stanza because of a knee operation. His improvement with each game was welcomed by fans and coaches alike.

An upset-minded Kingsmen with nothing to lose almost had a sectional crown for the first time since 1973. In their opener, the Penn Kingsmen defeated a scrappy but small Jimtown squad by the score of 45-40. In the 1976 sectional's closest game, Penn edged out the Goshen Redskins, 51-50, on some last second heroics. Facing one of the state's top 20 teams in Elkhart Central, the Black and Gold placed well before succumbing, 65-51.

Kingsmen win sectional title

Penn's girls' basketball team in just their first season fashioned a fine 8-6 record which included the girls' sectional championship at LaVille high school.

With a young team consisting of mostly sophomores and juniors the girls started out slowly by losing five of their first seven ball games. But by gaining valuable experience in those early losses they came back to win their last three regular season games, and three straight to take the title in the first girls' basketball sectional before bowing out to Wawasee in the first game of the Goshen regionals.

Other highlights of the girls' season, coached by Miss Cathy Hahn, were the beating of South Bend St. Joe three times and crushing arch rival Mishawaka.

Track girls go 24 in a row

Victory is sweet and the 1974-75 girls' track team had their share. The team, led by Coach Don Sloan, had their second undefeated season in a row, giving them a 24-meet winning streak.

One of the sweetest victories of all was against Wawasee, who was unbeaten in four consecutive seasons. It was close but a win in the final 880 medley relay gave Penn a 54-51 victory.

When sectional time arrived, Penn was ready and sent at least one girl in every event but one. Their efforts paid off when they captured their second consecutive sectional title, and sent two relay teams and five individuals to the regionals.

Penn was represented at state in the 440 yard dash by Julee LaVine and in the 100 and 220 yard dashes by Cheryl Olson.

Girls tennis a first at Penn

For Penn's first girls' tennis team ever, the winning did not count so much as the hard work, time and effort put in by the team as a whole. Coach Gail Martin explained during the spring sports banquet, "A few of these girls that went out for tennis had never held a tennis racket before in their lives.

The team won one meet this year out of the five scheduled. In a tense and exciting meet, the girls played hard and fast to defeat Jimtown by a score of 5-2. Margie Thompson beat her opponent 6-2; 6-3 in a very long match. Also defeating their opponents were Cindy Bauder with a score of 6-1; 6-2, and Tami Greenawalt by 6-0, 6-1. The doubles also took both matches in hard and long games. Kathy Bruggeman and Betsy Strom defeated their opponents 6-1; 2-6; 6-3, and Debbie covert and Stacey Webb won by scores of 6-0; 6-4. Juniors Dawn Seese and Kay York also participated on the girls' first team last year.

Season record ends at 15-7

After getting off to a slow start in their indoor season, the 1974-75 cindermen came back to win their next three meets, and ended the year at 15-7. In a victory over South Bend Washington, Bob Nickel set an indoor record in the pole vault at 13'7", and Sunset Proctor tied the school mark of 5.6 in the 50 yard dash.

Coach Wiseman's Kingsmen lost one of their first outdoor meets to LaSalle, but it was not a failure. Rick Balmer leaped to a new height of 6'4" in the high jump and Dane Badgero set a record in the discus of 143'8".

Penn placed fourth in their sectionals and qualified four individuals in five events for the regionals. Penn was represented in state competition by Bob Nickel and Terry Walker, who shared the school mark in the pole vault at 14'.

Injuries hurt season record

Though coaches Bob Miller and Bob Cook feel that this year they did not achieve the goals they planned, in no way did they feel it was a disappointing season.

The Kingsmen began slowly, but came back to win six of their next seven games, including two impressive wins over state-ranked South Bend Clay and Plymouth.

Just when morale and spirit were reaching a peak, three serious injuries dealt the Kingsmen an unexpected blow from which they never quite recovered. They finished the season at 12-18.

Last spring's future was somewhat brighter as 7 of the 9 starters returned for '76 action. Captain Randy Hogue and also batting champion and most valuable player Keith Chavis were difficult to replace, but the returning line-up and some excellent B-team members gave this year's baseball K-men a wide radius of talent.

Nagy leads team

Junior Bret Nagy continued to lead the team in the 1975-76 golf season as he finished with the lowest average and was voted most valuable player. Dave Wozny, also a junior, took the most improved award.

Although the Kingsmen golfers could only compile a 3-16 record with wins against Riley, Adams and Elkhart Memorial, a better season is hoped for as all the golfers will be returning.

Penn's lowest team score of the year was a 309 in the last regular season meet. However, Elkhart Central and Mishawaka shot 299 and 304 respectively to defeat the Kingsmen.

During his sophomore season, Nagy served as team captain and will anchor this year's team. Senior Jim Gurber will serve as honorary captain this year.

The Kingsmen's score of 359 in sectionals did not qualify them for further competition in the golf tournament. The team score is made up of the four lowest golfers' scores.

Seniors leave "nest."

Like a seagull hen who must foster her young's growth and development, Penn-Harris-Madison brought the 1976 seniors into the world of other fledglings as kindergartners. With natural instinct and guidance all have matured and learned the ways of the world in varying degrees.

Early school years taught trust, honesty, and fear of the principal's paddle.

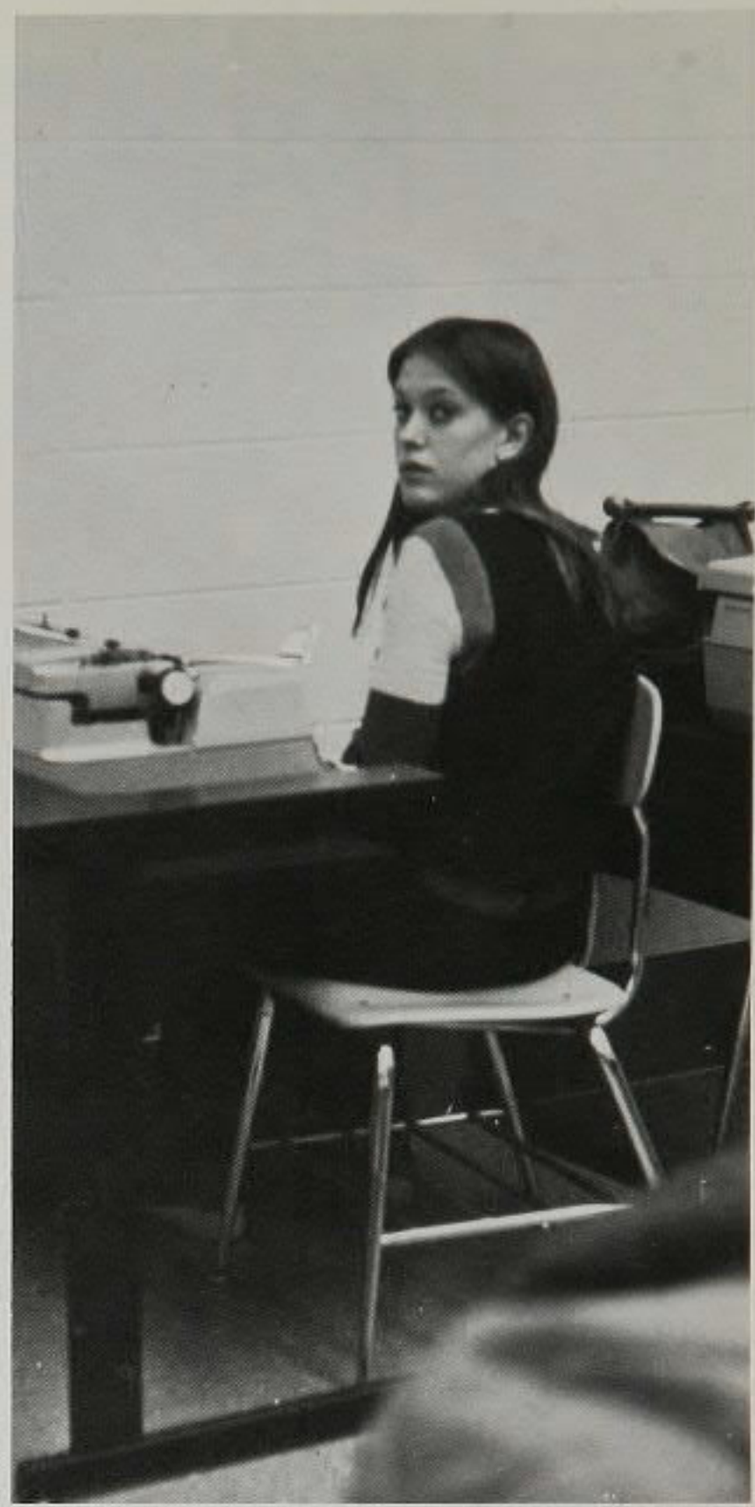
Junior high brought the realization that the world wasn't limited to one sex. Males grew emotionally upon the discovery that all cheerleaders didn't find them handsome. Girls mellowed on finding that the star quarterback considered them "one of the guys".

Sophomore year for many meant embarrassing mistakes, like apologizing to waste baskets for backing into them, or worse yet, walking into a senior class.

Junior year, self confidence replaced clumsiness, which led to a windfall of romances.

The last two years at Penn they discovered each other's inner beings. They found out how much a warm smile, gentle touch, or a laughing wink could mean to one another.

Yes, they've grown, but the graduating seniors still have far to go. During graduation, mother casts them from the nest. Some will falter with inexperience, but most will soon learn to grasp this new found freedom and spread their wings to the world.



Photographers surprise Kelley Marshman.

Cheerleader Phil Walerko inspires the stands to spur the senior Powderpuffers on to victory.

Sophomores declare their school spirit with banners during homecoming week.

Sophs explore surroundings

With only three years experience at the middle school level, many sophomores aren't sure of themselves at Penn. They fear being swallowed by its immensity, of losing themselves in the hundreds already crowding the hallways. But they learn quickly enough that they must prove themselves—and they did by building the homecoming float, by selling spirit stickers, and raising money for the prom. By hiking the spirit levels to super-sophomore levels, they made PHS proud of its '78 class, who know the real meaning of "feeling free."

Opposite Sophomores declare their school spirit with banners during homecoming week.

Junior year: halfway there

Girls parading about the halls with patriotically painted faces . . . winning Powder Puff Football . . . trig class! Ten dollars for the best hall decorations, $1,100 from a hairy basketball game.

The secrets of high school are explained mysteries; Penn no longer looms as a frightening monster. With a year's experience under their belts, the members of the junior class function as the backbone of the school. They are at the midpoint; there is a long way to go, with yet another year of hard work ahead of them. But the juniors know that they can make it now; their record proves it.

THE FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF MISHAWAKA
101 L.W.W. Mishawaka

Yet, you're only beginning. There's a lot ahead of you. Many options. Important decisions to make. More important decisions than you have ever confronted. You can draw on what you've met, and the different experiences that have made the past four years the most memorable years yet. But when it comes right down to choosing, it's up to you.

So consider carefully each step you take. But don't let your caution eliminate all chance. Taking chances, after carefully considering the situation is what life is all about. It's also a large part of success.

The First National Bank of Mishawaka charts its history in decisive action, preceded by careful evaluation and planning. We're here to serve you in the planning and decisions that will make today and tomorrow more real and alive than yesterday.

I've got to be where my spirit
can run free.
Got to find my corner of the sky.

from Pippin
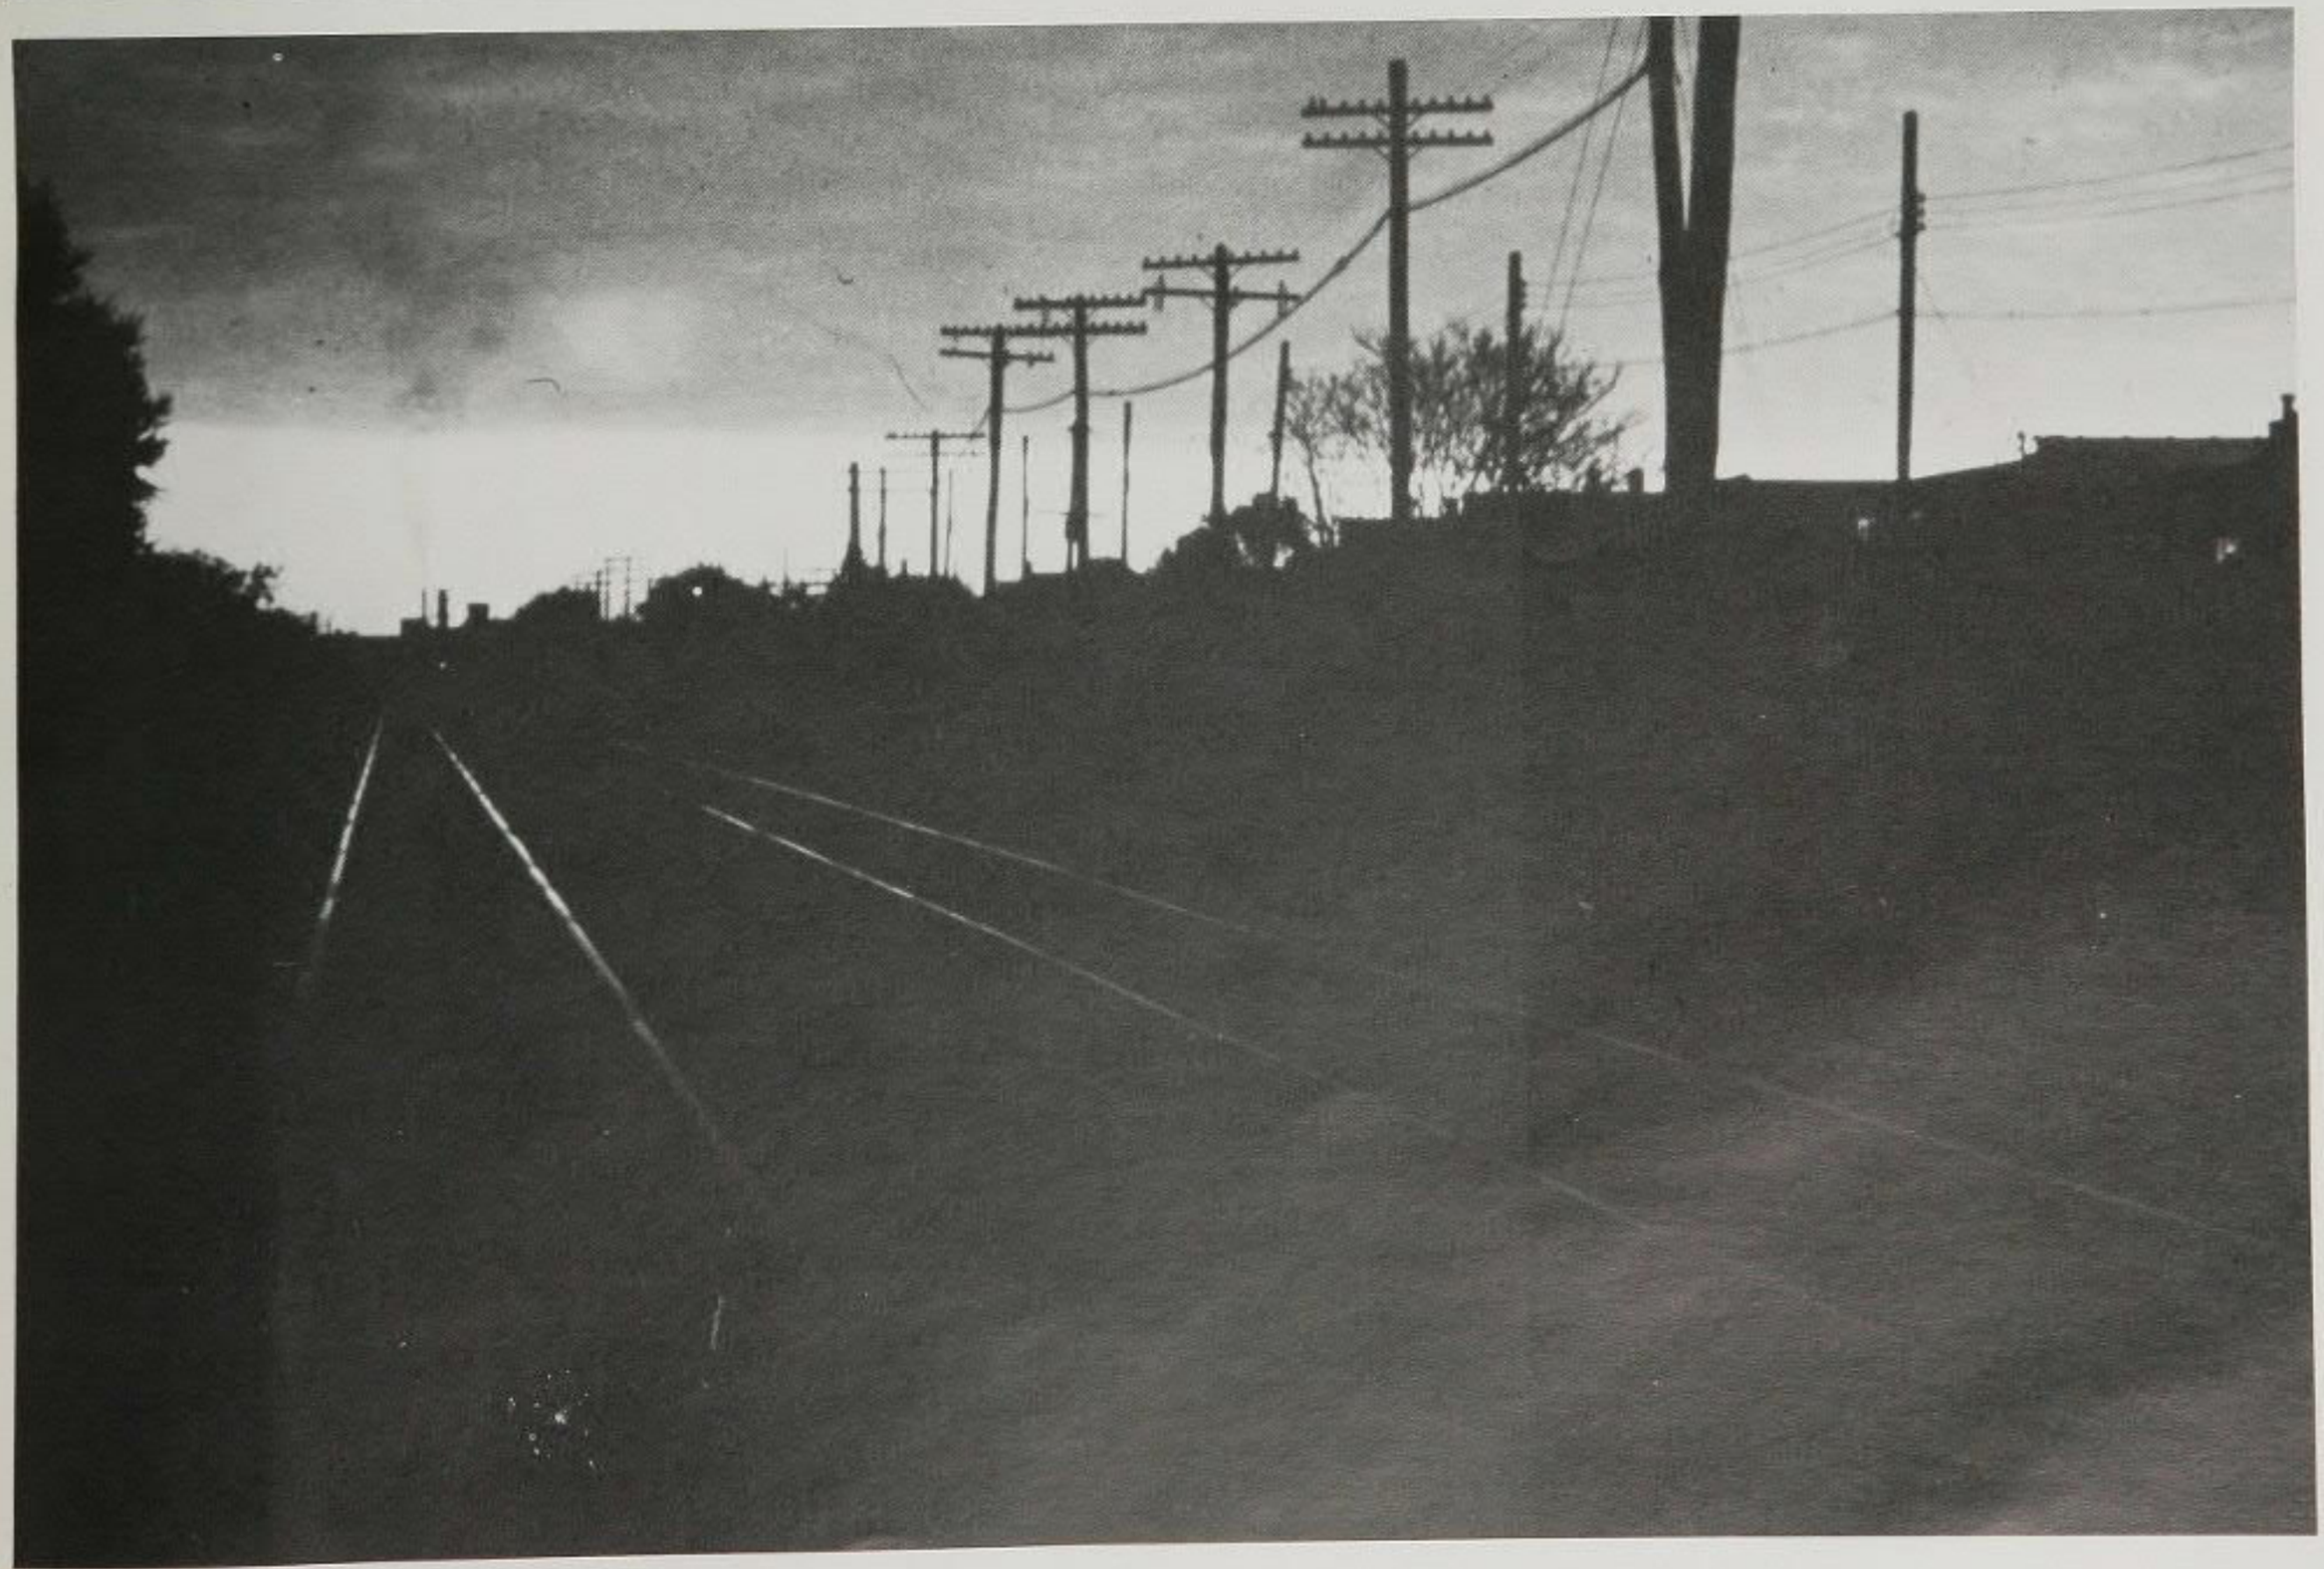
Stephen Schwartz



We've moved fast
We need love
A part we offer is our only freedom
